Conscious Discipline Skill for the Next Week: Positive Intent
Conscious Discipline is for Kids and Adults
A new skill will be introduced every two to three weeks.

Seeing with positive intent means that we assume the other person either does not know how to behave in a certain situation or is having a difficult time handling a situation. Assuming either of these allows us to reach out and be helpful. When we assume positive intent, everyone wins. Positive intent integrates the brain and produces oxytocin. Oxytocin is a hormone in the brain involved in emotional bonding. It affects generosity, increases empathy and develops trust between people.
